ABOUT PROJECT STEP

For over four decades, Project STEP (String Training and Education Program) has provided our students with a creative and safe learning environment. We believe in a future where the classical music profession will reflect the racial and ethnic diversities of our community.

Project STEP is a highly-successful, national award-winning string instrument training program (violin, viola, bass, and cello) for youth in Boston and surrounding areas. Recognizing that certain ethnicities are highly underrepresented in the field of classical music, Project STEP was established in 1984 to address this problem. Since its founding, Project STEP has provided musically-talented Black and LatinX youth with a comprehensive, long-term music education that opens doors, and creates lifelong opportunities. By maintaining high expectations coupled with sustained engagement and mentorship, STEP students have the tools they need to be successful in their future careers and as leaders of our communities. Project STEP's mission is built on the belief that social justice and the arts contribute significantly to personal growth by strengthening human potential, generating community ties, building self-esteem, and developing skills in young people.

Did you know?

African American and Black musicians account for only 1.2% of our nation's orchestras and Latinx musicians make up only 1.6%. *

Project STEP has been advocating for equity and inclusion in the arts and classical music field for over 40 years.

100 % of Project STEP graduates have gone on to college or conservatory.

Approximately 60% of Project STEP students go into the music profession.
